Lykanthea | Some Viscera
Edlis Neeson Theater
Sep 26–27, 2024 | 7:30 pm

Led by Lakshmi Ramgopal, Lykanthea is a multidisciplinary collective whose performances and installations use pop idioms to experiment with traditional South Asian art forms. Some Viscera is their latest work—a live concert of song and movement, featuring an immersive stage design that transforms the MCA Stage into a lush garden. In addition to Ramgopal, the project features an ensemble starring Asha Rowland, Erica Miller, Johanna Brock, and Ben Zucker. Together, they integrate elements of Carnatic music, Bharatanatyam dance, and Sanskrit and Tamil poetry into a performance of rich, intimate dance theater.

Lykanthea performed at the MCA’s 50th Anniversary Celebration in 2017, and presented an early iteration of Some Viscera through the MCA’s In Progress series in 2019.

Every house has a door and Essi Kausalainen | Broken Aquarium
Anne & John Kern Terrace Garden
Sep 28 | 2:00 pm
Sep 29 | 4:00 pm

Broken Aquarium takes its cue from Camille Saint-Saëns’s 1886 musical suite for children The Carnival of the Animals. Riffing on the famed Aquarium movement of the musical suite, this performance contemporizes Saint-Saëns’s work, depicting an impossible ecosystem of endangered or extinct sea creatures. Featuring handmade costumes by Essi Kausalainen and live music by Tim Kinsella and Jenny Polus, this performance uses poetry, sound, and movement to question what it means to be human. The performance will take place outside on the MCA’s Anne & John Kern Terrace Garden. Guests will be able to experience the performance from the lawn’s center steps as well as from atop the terrace.

cat mahari | blk ark: the impossible manifestation
Edlis Neeson Theater
Sep 28, 2024 | 7:30 pm
Sep 29, 2024 | 2:00 pm

cat mahari’s blk ark: the impossible manifestation is an interactive performance with live, semi-improvisational sound elements that draw from hip-hop, house, dance, and film. Exploring improvisational and Black cultural strategies of play—drawn from traditions such as joanin’ (Atlanta slang for ritualized insult exchanges, otherwise known as The Dozens) and the soul clap—mahari’s performance explores modes of survival and liberation and questions what it will take to reach radical freedom in our collective future.

In 2022, cat mahari presented this project at the MCA as an In Progress program. The project was developed with the support of the New Works Initiative Chicago Commission Program, which fosters the artistic and professional growth of Chicago artists, providing consistent and comprehensive support for their development.

The claim that painting is dead has been a common refrain among critics for decades. Nevertheless, artists have continuously pushed the medium forward. The Living End: Painting and Other Technologies, 1970–2020 surveys the arc of painting over the last fifty years, highlighting it as a mode of artistic expression in a constant state of renewal and rebirth.

This international and intergenerational group exhibition presents the work of more than forty artists who have redefined painting using emerging technologies, imaging techniques, and their own bodies. Examining the impact that computers, cameras, and television, as well as social media and automation, have had on the medium, The Living End positions painting itself as a manual “technology” that has shifted further away from the immediacy of the artist’s hand over the past fifty years. The subsequent conceptual shift has led artists to challenge what constitutes a painting, how they are produced, and who (or what) can be considered a painter.

Employing a range of mediums beyond painting, such as video, sculpture, installation, and performance, the featured artists subvert longstanding traditions and mythologies of painting—and the notion of the painter as singular genius—to offer a vital portrait of a medium that is still being reinvented.

The Living End is curated by Jamillah James, Manilow Senior Curator, with Jack Schneider, Assistant Curator.

Andrea Carlson (Grand Portage Ojibwe/European descent, b. 1979; lives and works in northern Minnesota and Chicago, IL) considers how landscapes are shaped by history, relationships, and power. Her artworks imagine places that are “everywhere and nowhere,” visualizing these shifting yet ever-present dynamics. Grounded in Anishinaabe understandings of space and time, the works in this exhibition reflect on how land holds memories of colonial expansion and violence, as well as Indigenous presence and resistance.

Across painting, video, and sculpture, Carlson organizes imagined landscapes around one constant: the horizon. This line is reminiscent of her homelands on Lake Superior. It is also a significant art historical trope that artists have employed to depict territories as vast and vacant, ripe for the taking. Carlson’s prismatic works are not empty: they are densely layered with an abundance of motifs, making reference to the tactics of colonialism as well as her family and peers, Ojibwe culture, and Indigenous sovereignty. Confronting ongoing histories of erasure and dispossession, Carlson proposes that what appears to be lost can be remade, reimagined, or otherwise regained.

Andrea Carlson: Shimmer on Horizons is curated by Iris Colburn, Curatorial Associate.

Performances

Edgar Arceneaux | Until, Until, Until…
Edlis Neeson Theater
Oct 17–19, 2024 | 7:30 pm

Until, Until, Until…, which won the Best of Show Award at the 2015 Performa Biannual in New York City, is a performance by multidisciplinary artist Edgar Arceneaux that reenacts a controversial performance by Ben Vereen to question the truth of past narratives.

Arceneaux’s work is based on Vereen’s two-part performance at Ronald Reagan’s 1981 inaugural ball, which consisted of a song and dance in blackface as a tribute to Bert Williams, followed by the artist removing the makeup. This performance functioned as a poignant, clever, and harrowing commentary on the exploitation of black creatives—however, though the first half was broadcast on television, the latter half of the performance was never aired, and thus, Vereen’s original intent was lost. More than forty years later, Arceneaux takes the second half of Vereen’s performance as the basis for an examination of history, truth, and who wields the power to determine reality.

Following the performance, there will be a Q&A session with the artist.

Talks

Talk | Gordon Hall and B. Ingrid Olson
Edlis Neeson Theater
Oct 5, 2–3:30 pm

Inspired by current MCA exhibition Descending the Staircase, Chicago-based artist B. Ingrid Olson joins Gordon Hall, artist and founder of the Center for Experimental Lectures, for a performance, lecture, and debate on the use of the phrase “the body” in art historical rhetoric and discourse. The performance focuses on how these artists distort, abbreviate, and obscure bodies in their sculptural, photographic, and movement-based works. Hall’s 2020 essay “Why I Don’t Talk About ‘The Body’: A Polemic” functions as the departing point for a live debate responding to issues surrounding visibility and difference in how viewers engage with artists’ work.

This talk is organized by Mariana Fernández, visiting curator, as part of the MCA DNA Research Initiative, which invites a new generation of curators and writers to trace threads that live within the MCA’s holdings of approximately 3,300 objects, and to produce essays, videos, and programs related to their research. The MCA DNA Research Initiative is supported by the Chanel Culture Fund.
